work ethic of a man, a Modena, Italy, homeboy who worked at his father's chosen vocation of schoolteacher, then as an insurance salesman, day jobs for a struggling tenor. As a 19-year-old, Pavarotti was a

As a 19-year-old, Pavarotti was a member of a local opera ensemble that won an international vocal competition. Then, a 25-year-old Pavarotti won the Achille Peri competition. The first prize was a role in a real opera production, and on April 29, 1961, his life of operatic grandeur began, filled with high notes and precious few low ones like the aforementioned Taj Mahal clunker.

"They are very rare, but there are nights like that," says Pavarotti of the show that spawned a return engagement. "It has happened to me in years, about five or six times. And have always gone back. Because I a a professional singer, very profesional"

Explaining why it has taken TI Tenors so long to find their way Chicago, Pavoritit asys. "I am alway very ready to go to a place. But I' not a workaholic like I was in the past. Now I am always much relaxe now, I sing the things that I like."

One rumor has that Pavarot wants to make his la. eell perform ances in 2001 with Vest. Ja Fors.

One rumor na. that Pavarou wants to make his fa. e.g. lperform ances in 2001 with Ver. La Forz del Destino, a role he has no surroustage. Of this, Pavarotti ch. "Bullshop," neatly substituth word suitable for a family publication. "No, I am not thinking of retire-there were a gs le gram to do, Pavarotti admits the there were "not many."

"One is the opera that you mentioned before that you never mentioned," quips the 64-year-old sin might be capable of assuming his mantle. Prompted for their names by this reporter with a "Like ..." Pavarotti replies, "Like I don't tell you."

ti replies, "Like I don't tell you."

If bloodlines are any indication, Pavarotti has a ways to go. His father is still singing at the age of 88. It could even be argued that he has begun laying the groundwork for an extended career outside the opera house with his pep work. After all, how much effort can it take for one so gifted to hang out and do tunes with pop and rock singers? Pavarottis farme is such that he doesn't have to go for high Cs anymore. This is a man who could almost sing Mary Had a Little Lumb, and people would pay for the experience.

Then again, who knows? He has said he would like to sing until 2001, completing a 40-year career in opera.
On the other hand, notions of avavarotti retirement are also quelled by his banker's perspective on the human voice.

"It is like having extra money," says Pavarotti. "You should put the moneyin the bank, and sing with the interest, that I hoercent, not the capital. I have aways known this, because" we always heard my father talls. about this."

ertainly, Pavarotti started out nging with the capital, explaining his role as "king of the high C." But today, he is indeed cruising. Whether this is a sailing off into the sunset or rejuvenated twilight years as a singer, only he knows. The public only seems to know that it wants more of a man who is highbrow legend coupled with pop culture icon. Why?

"It is because I am a chubby boy," says Pavarotti, referring to his equally legendary girth. "I'm a chubby, nice boy. I hope they will say that I was a very honest, professional singer, and that I loved very much people."
